

HIST 410 – How to Teach History
Professor Annelise Heinz
Fall 2022 – CRN 13489
Tuesdays, 5:00-7:50 PM

This course for advanced undergraduates and graduate students will engage with the intellectual and practical concerns of teaching history in the K12 or higher education context. It is a rigorous course designed for anyone who has already taken history courses at the college level and is considering a career involving teaching related subjects. Students will work with significant independence to create usable materials such as a syllabus and/or lesson plans. We will discuss shared readings, group work, and independent projects in our weekly class meetings.